

ID	621
Curricular Unit	Anthropology and History of the Body
Regent	Maria Manuela Vasconcelos Hasse de Almeida e Silva
Learning Outcomes	At the end of the course, students should be able: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - to be acquainted with the different expressions of human behaviour based on the body and from its social and historical manifestations. - To analyse the social conditions of contextualization of those expressions of human behaviour, frame working permanencies and changes. - to understand the human and social problems inherent to the human body as a social phenomenon (birth, education, relationships, reproduction, marriage, ageing, maturity, disease and death). - to identify the social dimension of human behaviour, where the body is the core of action and thinking configurations. - to transfer/project that element of understanding into time and space. - to apply and develop critical thinking aiming to be able to recognise and define problems, to formulate adequate hypothesis, to make pertinent options, to draw valid conclusions and to apply them.
Syllabus	This course studies the human being beginning in the body, as a social phenomenon, and, thus, as a structure of representations, revealing a inbuilt collection of behaviours. Everyday practices interlaced with the preservation of life are particularly analysed It analyzes in particular the that. The course takes into account ideas, images, symbols, representations, norms and conduct, and how these develop/are abandoned. The course is organized as follows: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> . Block 1 - Introduction to the study of Anthropology and History of the Body; . Block 2 - Marcel Mauss' contribution: mainly with his work about the Techniques of the Body . Block 3 - Education of the body, and . Block 4 - Development of the body representations associated with medical, nature, health and life conceptions of the body
Evaluation	In each class it's organized a reading and discussion of classic textes from which students expose doubts and questions introduced by the texto and the authors related with the Program and the need to associate concepts, attitudes and practices suggested by the texts with presente reality experienced and known by the students. Final Frequency Test and Final Exam.
Bibliography	CRESPO, Jorge - A História do Corpo. Lisboa. 1992. HASSE, Manuela - O Divertimento do Corpo. Corpo, Lazer e Desporto, na transição do Século XIX para o Século XX, em Portugal. Lisboa. 1999. MAUSS, Marcel - Sociologie et Anthropologie. Paris. 1989.